PATERNO OUT

PENN STATE CANS COACH, UNIVERSITY PRESIDENT OVER SCANDAL

From news services

Coach Joe Paterno and the president of the school have lost their jobs, effective immediately, over a child sex abuse scandal at Penn State, university trustees announced Wednesday night.

John P. Surma, vice chairman of trustees, said that President Graham Spanier was being replaced and Paterno, the longtime head football coach, would not finish the remainder of the season.

Tom Bradley will be head coach in Paterno's absence. Rod Erickson, executive vice president and provost of the school, will be interim president, school officials said.

Hundreds of emotional, chanting Penn State students converged on the university administration building Wednesday to protest the firing of the head football coach.

Chanting "Hell no, Joe won't go" and "We want Joe back," they cursed former assistant coach Jerry Sandusky, who was charged Saturday with sexually abusing eight young boys over a period of nearly 15 years.

Joe Paterno

Graham Spanier

The students also shouted criticisms of the news media.

The atmosphere was tense, but there were no immediate reports of violence.

Earlier, Paterno, 84, issued a statement saying he was "absolutely devastated by the developments" involving a former assistant football coach and two university officials and that he would end his 46-year tenure as head football coach at the end of the season. The trustees decided to move that timetable up.

"I grieve for the children and their families, and I pray for their comfort and relief," Paterno said. "With the benefit of hindsight, I wish I had done more."

Paterno's contract was set to expire at the end of the season.

Some had called for him to resign immediately because of his response to allegations brought to him in 2002 by a graduate assistant, who said he had seen retired defensive coordinator Sandusky, now 67, sexually assaulting a young boy in a shower at the campus football complex.

Paterno reported the allegations to his boss. Pennsylvania's attorney general said it appeared Paterno had met his obligations under state law, but critics have said the coach should have reported the suspected abuse to police.

Sandusky, who was arrested Saturday, is accused of sexual offenses, child endangerment and "corruption of a minor" involving eight boys, most or all of whom he met through The Second Mile, the charity he founded to help troubled youths, prosecutors said.

Penn State alumni weigh in on scandal

Chicago Tribune

Bears defensive tackle Anthony Adams called the Penn State scandal "a complete shocker" and "heartbreaking" when asked Wednesday about his former defensive coordinator Jerry Sandusky and head coach Joe Paterno.

Sandusky, who retired in 1999, is accused of sexually assaulting eight boys as young as 10 over a period of nearly 15 years. And Paterno is under fire for reporting an alleged 2002 incident brought to his attention to the school's athletic director but not to legal authorities. Paterno was fired by university trustees Wednesday.

"When I was there, Coach Paterno was a great man. Coach Sandusky, you know, the same," Adams said Wednesday at Halas Hall. "First-class organization. Nobody joked about [Sandusky] or had anything negative to say about Coach Sandusky and the Second Mile program [for disadvantaged youngsters that Sandusky founded]. Everything there was first class."

Adams was a freshman for the Nittany Lions in 1998, a year before Sandusky retired.

The investigation is ongoing in terms of both the alleged sexual misconduct and the failure of high-up university officials to alert legal authorities.

"It's a complete shocker to me, just like it is for everybody else," Adams said. "I put a lot of pride in my school and the coaching staff that was there. For this to go on is heart-breaking."

Bears kicker Robbie Gould played at Penn State from 2001-04 and continues to support Paterno.

Asked if the scandal will tarnish Paterno's legacy, Gould replied:

"He has 409 career wins. Obviously, there is a situation that I know nothing about and it doesn't involve me. So obviously I am not going to answer any questions involving the situation. But Joe was a great coach when I was there and he has always been a great coach."

Exorcise those burrito demons

Can we be honest with each other? I've been hitting it a little hard recently. From heavy "celebration" on Halloween to eating things covered in cheese, gravy or barbecue sauce (or all three, on special occasions), my body hasn't been feeling the way it should.

It's one thing to cut back on beer and eat a ton of salad, but

For anyone considering a cleanse, here is what I learned from my experience.

» You will stink. No, seriously. After a day, my body started getting rid of those buffalo chicken quesadillas and carne asada burritos by any means necessary. My breath was atrocious, I smelled like a sack of wet tennis balls dipped in ranch and I spent quite a bit of time "meeting the browns," if you smell what I'm cooking (and you should be happy you didn't have to).

» The Food Network knows when you're on a cleanse. That has to be it. Why else would they schedule a marathon of "Diners, Drive-Ins and Dives" on the same weekend? I had dreams about walking cheesesteaks being controlled by a 60-foot Guy Fieri.

» Prepare to get some pep in your step. I woke up at 9 a.m. every day, whether I went to bed at midnight or 3 a.m. My energy was high and I felt awesome.

» You will gain appreciation for your sober friends. I apologize on behalf of every drunk person ever, you guys. We suck. On Friday, I was about 11 seconds away from unleashing the dragon on this group of wasted kids on the Blue Line.

» Consideration of what goes into your pie hole will increase. I'm more aware of food now. What's in it? How was it made? Also, I'm now thinking about getting a juicer—if not for the health benefits, then for the mimosas made with fresh OJ.

All in all, my experience felt pretty legit. I lost 6 pounds and feel good, though I probably should tell you to consult with your doctor before you try it at home. Now if you'll excuse me, I've got a date with a Baconator ...

ERNEST WILKINS IS CHICAGO'S WINGMAN.

I don't believe in moderation. So I decided to try a cleanse—you know, one of those programs that's supposed to purge all of the nasty stuff from your system and leave you feeling healthier and more energetic. On the advice of a friend, I reached out to a company called BluePrintCleanse, which let me try one of its programs for free.

It worked like this: For three days, I could consume only six juices (provided by BluePrintCleanse), ranging from a green liquid with about eight veggies to something called "cashew milk" that came in this cryovac "Terminator 2"-looking contraption. The instructions advised me not to eat meat or dairy, or drink booze, coffee or anything that I normally survive on.

Rather than whine about it—after all, it was my idea—I decided to go into the cleanse full-force. These juices would be my only sources of nourishment (other than water and the occasional cup of green tea) for the entire period.

PAY PHONES

SPIKE IN CELLPHONE VIOLATIONS A WINDFALL FOR CITY

By Leonor Vivanco and Lolly Bowean

REDEYE

Call your friend to catch up. Shoot a text to figure out the plan for tonight. Update your Facebook status.

Just don't do it behind the wheel.

A record number of drivers were issued cellphone violation tickets in Chicago for not using a hands-free device last year, translating into millions of dollars in revenue for the city, according to figures obtained by RedEye and the Tribune.

In 2010, Chicago police issued 23,292 tickets for using a cellphone while driving, the highest number of citations handed out in a single year for the offense.

The number is a 73 percent increase from 2006, the first full year that the city's cellphone law went into effect.

Those 2010 tickets brought in $2.2 million in revenue for the city, data show.

The figures show the city has become more aggressive in issuing the violations, which are difficult to fight and come with a hefty fine that has increased from $50 to up to $500 in just five years.

"It's pay short money now, or pay long money later," said Alvin Wooten, 42, a South Sider who was ticketed twice for talking on his cellphone without a hands-free device and chose to pay the fine rather than face a higher fee by contesting it.

Because of a change in the way those tickets are processed, the city doesn't have to offer a cut on most of those fines to the state or Cook County, resulting in a loss of revenue for them, the newly released data show.

The loss of money comes at a time when both the county and the state are struggling to balance their budgets. It's part of a continued city push to wring more money out of taxpayers through tickets and fines.

Former Mayor Richard M. Daley started the trend with red-light cameras that brought in $69 million last year, and now Mayor

Alvin Wooten has been issued two tickets for talking on his phone while driving. E. JASON WAMBSGANS/TRIBUNE

EFFECT ON TRAFFIC

There is no research that shows issuing costly citations makes roads safer or drivers less likely to use their cell phone, said Roy Lucke, the director of transportation safety programs at Northwestern University Center for Public Safety. The Chicago Police Department could not say if issuing more cell phone tickets deters drivers from using the devices, but said officers enforce traffic offenses to make the roads safer.

Emanuel is asking state lawmakers to allow cameras to issue $100 tickets to speeders near schools and parks.

Some Chicago-area residents said they're glad the city enforces the cellphone ban.

Verdell Butler, 50, of Maywood, said he was almost rear-ended by other drivers using their phones, and always uses a headset while he's driving.

"I think [the cellphone ban is] definitely needed. It saves lives," he said. "Pull over if you can. That few seconds make a difference."

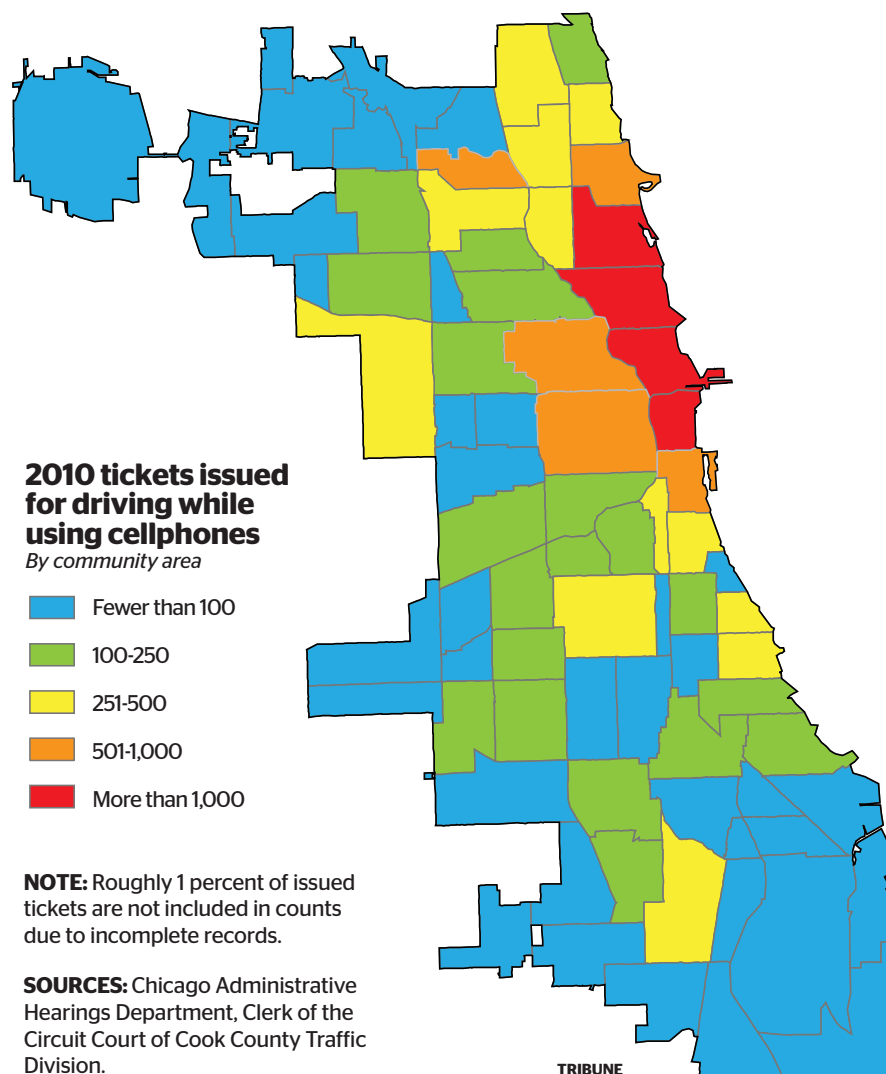

On the morning Wooten was stopped for the first time, he was scrambling to get to work and begged the officer for a warning since he had the phone on speaker and not held to his head, he said. He was given the ticket.

Ten days later Wooten was taking another

Tickets for driving on the phone

The map below shows the 19,954 tickets issued by Chicago police in 2010 and sent to the city's Administrative Hearings Department. An additional 3,316 tickets went to the Cook County Traffic Court and are not shown. Traffic Court handled an additional 22 tickets for violating the state texting ban.

But in 2008, the city tweaked its cellphone ordinance to allow most of the tickets to go before the Administrative Hearings Department, a quasi-judicial body that settles some traffic and public safety matters in the city.

The change in language to the city ordinance mainly was made to bring it in line with the Illinois Vehicle Code, which classifies some cellphone violations as equipment violations, said Roderick Drew, a spokesman for the city's law department.

A result of the change, however, is that most of the money from the tickets now goes to the city.

And the county and the state have taken significant losses, said Dorothy Brown, the Clerk of the Circuit Court of Cook County.

"They are really taking what would have gone to the county and state," Brown said.

According to Brown, before the ordinance changed, in 2007 the Circuit Court of Cook County processed 17,413 cellphone tickets. In 2010, the number of tickets processed decreased to 3,316.

The county lost about $858,000 in 2010 as a result of the change, and the state lost about $352,000, according to a Tribune analysis of city-provided data.

The city's revenue department says the enforcement of the cellphone law is not about revenue.

"We're looking to enforce safety and improve it," said Holly Stutz, deputy comptroller for the city's department of finance and revenue.

Fight or flight?

Ticketed drivers face a tough choice

RedEye/Chicago Tribune

Chicago isn't joking around when it comes to talking and texting in the car.

In addition to the city issuing more tickets in recent years, the cellphone violations are difficult to challenge successfully, records show. Drivers issued a cellphone ticket have the option of either mailing in the $100 fine or challenging the ticket before an administrative law judge, much like a parking ticket.

The majority of residents who show up before the judge still end up paying the fine, records show. And drivers who unsuccessfully challenge their cellphone violations also have to pay an additional $40 in court costs. They also face higher fines for the violations if they fight in court.

Lexie Dang learned that the hard way.

She said a police officer gave her a ticket near the intersection of Pulaski Road and Montrose Avenue. The Northwest Side has seen a flurry of tickets issued, data show.

At the hearing, Dang, 23, of Albany Park, told the judge she wasn't talking on her phone, but retrieving it after it fell on the floor of her car. Dang said her car was in park and she wasn't dialing, but the hearing officer found Dang liable. She was ordered to pay $140.

"I was so pissed when I walked out," she said of the hearing.

Brenda Sandoval, 24, of Pilsen, said she wasn't on her phone when she was stopped by a police officer for blowing through a stop sign in Pilsen. When she took a moment to call a relative to ask them to bring her insurance card that she left at home, she said the officer wrote her a citation, even though she says she was wearing an earpiece.

"I had no proof, so I had to plead guilty," Sandoval said. "To fight it, it's a long process. I'm already missing a day from work and I can't afford to drag this out."

route to work when he was stopped by the same officer and issued another cellphone violation.

"I had the phone on speaker," a frustrated Wooten said, explaining that his ear bud is uncomfortable.

In 2005, the city banned cellphone use while driving without a hands-free device. At the time, the cases were sent to traffic court in Cook County. The fine was divided between the city, the county and the state, officials said.

It's been more than a year since former Mayor Daley floated the idea of putting ads on bridge houses along the river—and still the structures remain bare. BRIAN CASSELLA/TRIBUNE

Rahm seeking an ad-vantage

Chicago Tribune

Nearly a year and a half after then-Mayor Richard M. Daley floated the idea of allowing corporate advertising on downtown Chicago River bridge houses, the landmark limestone structures remain bare.

The company hired by the city to sell the sponsorships has had a hard time finding takers, and among the latest hurdles is a fear that Occupy Chicago protesters would target the ads.

Mayor Emanuel, however, has lined up a bank as the first bridge sponsor, if only for a month.

The problems in getting the ad scheme off the ground illustrate how tricky it is for the city to count on that kind of cash. And Emanuel is doing exactly that as he pencils in $25 million from his own advertising push to balance his first budget.

The mayor is confident he'll come up with the money by selling ad space on everything from buildings to the city's website to garbage cans to parking pay boxes.

There are plenty of indications, however, that it isn't a good time to count on that much money from a civic marketing plan.

The Chicago Park District's recent attempt to sell ad space on lifeguard chairs and umbrellas fell flat. And former Gov. Rod Blagojevich thought he could raise $20 million a year by getting companies to pay to put their logos on state employee badges and to brand Earthquake Preparedness Week and the state police's tactical unit. That fizzled.

HOMICIDE TRACKER

By Tracy Swartz

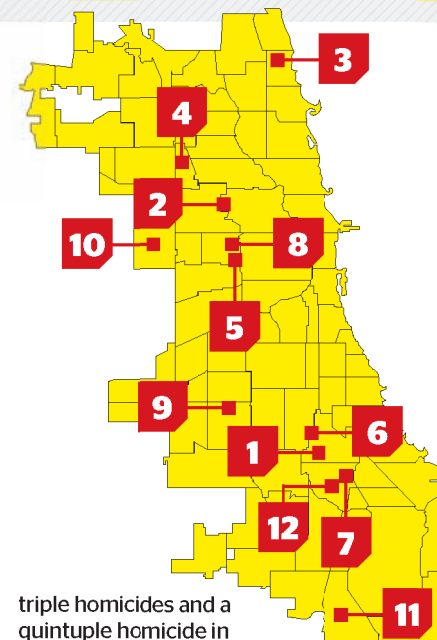

TSWARTZ@TRIBUNE.COM | @TRACYSWARTZ

Four men were shot and killed at a Riverdale convenience store last week in the first quadruple homicide in more than a year, a RedEye analysis of preliminary police data found.

Before last week, the last quadruple homicide was Sept. 2, 2010, when four men were shot and killed in a West Lawn garage, according to RedEye data. Last week the first triple homicide of the year was recorded in Chatham.

The number of homicides with more than one victim is down this year compared to 2010 year. This year, in addition to the Riverdale and Chatham shootings, there have been 10 double homicides, RedEye data shows.

In 2010, in addition to the West Lawn shootings, there were 14 double homicides, six triple homicides and a quintuple homicide in Chicago Lawn.

Citywide, homicides were down 7 percent from January through October compared to the same period in 2010, RedEye determined.

This year in Chicago, there have been 10 double homicides, one triple homicide and one quadruple homicide. Note: The weekly homicide tracker will return next Thursday.

Daley going to Harvard on fellowship

Daley will meet with student groups, lead discussion sessions and participate in public policy classes.

House votes no on bill to expand state gambling

Aldermen look to extend tax on tobacco products

Two aldermen looking for last-minute ways to head off painful budget cuts proposed by Mayor Emanuel floated the idea Wednesday of extending the city's cigarette tax to other tobacco products. Aldermen and administration officials weren't sure how much new money could be raised by broadening the tobacco tax.

Voters reject 'Personhood' amendment

1 Mississippi voters overwhelmingly rejected an amendment to the state constitution that would have defined life as starting at conception, and if passed, would have re-opened the national debate on abortion.

If Amendment 26—also called the "Personhood" amendment—had passed Tuesday, Mississippi would have been the first U.S. state to define a fertilized egg as a person, a controversial concept aimed at outlawing abortion, some types of birth control and infertility methods that result in the loss of embryos.

The Postal Service expects to announce it lost as much as $10 billion in fiscal year 2011 when it reports its annual earnings next week.

A Dow downer

Murphy drops out as host of Oscars

4 LOS ANGELES Eddie Murphy announced Wednesday he would not host next year's Academy Awards, one day after colleague and show producer Brett Ratner quit over an anti-gay remark he made over the weekend.

"I appreciate how Eddie feels about losing his creative partner, Brett Ratner, and we all wish him well," said Tom Sherak, president of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences. The 84th Academy Awards program is scheduled for Feb. 26.

Murphy worked with Ratner, a director, in the newly released action comedy "Tower Heist."

"First and foremost I want to say that I completely understand and support each party's decision with regard to a change of producers for this year's Academy Awards ceremony," Murphy said in a statement.

"I was truly looking forward to being a part of the show that our production team and writers were just starting to develop, but I'm sure that the new production team and host will do an equally great job."

On Wednesday evening, Sherak announced that Academy Award-winner Brian Grazer will replace Ratner and join Don Mischer as a producer on the show.

This will be the first time Grazer has produced the Oscar telecast.

Cutler's rear end isn't the only Bears attribute worth a look

RedEye

Jay Cutler apparently knows how to take a compliment.

The Bears quarterback maintained a sense of humor Wednesday when asked if it was true that he had the nicest rear end in the NFL.

"According to one person. I guess she's biased," Cutler replied with a big smile at the end of his weekly media session at Halas Hall.

The question was in reference to the tweet Cutler's former fiancée, Kristin Cavallari, delivered before Monday's game in Philadelphia.

"To the man with the best butt in football, good luck tonight @jaycutler6 ill be watching," Cavallari wrote Monday on her Twitter account, @KristinCav.

Well, let it be known that Cavallari isn't the only one noticing the Bears', err, assets. Not their posteriors per se, but other attributes that demand attention. TRIBUNE CONTRIBUTED

Jay Cutler's 'assets'

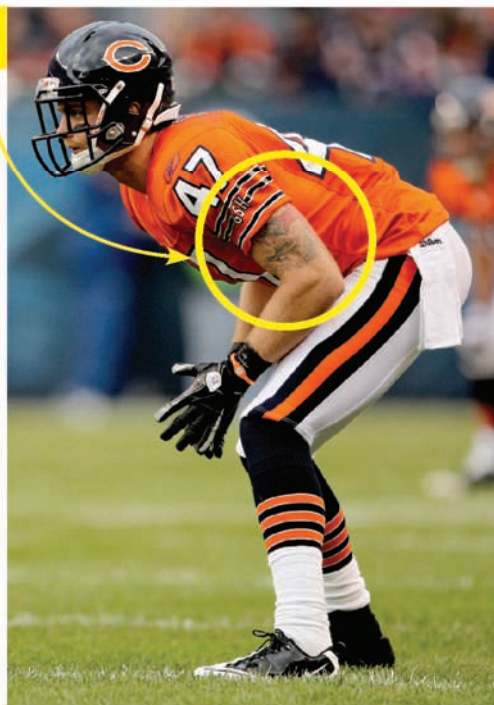

NUCCIO DINUZZO/TRIBUNE

Chris Conte's arms

The safety has a phoenix tattooed on his right arm and a large red cross on his left. His ink will be even more impressive if he plays with short sleeves in subzero weather.

Julius Peppers' knees

Even when they're not at 100 percent, as Peppers' knees have not been for much of the season, he's still sacking Michael Vick. C'est magnifique.

Marion Barber's hair

Charles Tillman was in the running in this category. Barber gets the edge, however, because he's not afraid to rock the long locks knowing would-be tacklers can use them against him.

Devin Hester's ankles

True, we don't get a good look at them through his socks and shoes. Yet they must be awfully impressive by the looks of his jaw-dropping moves on kick returns.

Earl Bennett's hands

Clearly Cutler can't get enough of them, as he often throws in the receiver's direction. Bennett and the QB also were teammates at Vanderbilt. Oh, the stories they could tell ...

Orange you glad it's only 5 grand?

Bears receiver Earl Bennett, who wore orange cleats during Monday's game at Philadelphia, has been fined $5,000 for violating the NFL's uniform policy. "I pretty much knew I was going to get a fine," he said. "It's cool. I've been out for a long time [with a chest injury]. I wanted to come out with the orange. I'm not really worried about the fine." TRIBUNE

Will UFC be Fox's next hit?

FIGHTIN' WORDS

Ted Gruber

» redeyesports.com
» @tribune.com
» @tedgruber

In the past decade, the Zuffa-owned Ultimate Fighting Championship has made considerable strides in pushing mixed martial arts further into the mainstream. And at 8 p.m. Saturday, the UFC makes its debut on Fox in a move that should serve to show even more people what MMA is all about.

When the UFC was shopping for TV deals, there was a lot of interest regarding who would take the brand to the next level. There were conversations with old broadcast partner Spike TV, and rumblings that the UFC simply would create its own network. Ultimately it signed a contract with Fox for seven years.

The only fight being shown live on Fox this weekend will be the heavyweight title bout between Cain Velasquez and Junior Dos Santos. Both fighters are undefeated in the UFC, and the extra motivation is there to put on a great performance and show how hard they have trained.

Meanwhile, another fighter on the Anaheim, Calif., card is Clay "The Carpenter" Guida, who is from Chicago. Being a former carpenter, Guida was training and fighting part-time, and when he debuted in the UFC in 2007, he made MMA his life.

Fast-forward to now and Guida has a four-fight win streak. Three of those were submissions, and he's earned a spot in Saturday's lightweight championship bout against Benson Henderson. Henderson is no slouch in the Octagon, as he had been a fixture in the other Zuffa-owned company, WEC, and finished with a 5-1 record.

Considering how much the UFC struggled in the beginning, Saturday is a watershed moment for the company and everyone who is die-hard fan of the sport. With owners Lorenzo and Frank Fertitta running the organization and president Dana White making the right moves so far, it looks as if the sport will continue to grow, with no immediate slowdown in the near future.

1 How should Devin Hester treat his injured ankle?

Take it to dinner. Even if it doesn't work, his taste buds and stomach will be satisfied.

Rub your hands together super-fast and apply heat. Advice from a "Mr." isn't much different than a "Dr."

Despite dropping his endorsements, maybe he can call on Red Bull and Under Armour to work some magic.

The only returns he should be running are ones to get a fresh ice pack out of the freezer.

Hot shower, ice pack, three Advil. This is nothing I want to joke about.

2 Why did Lovie Smith call out Las Vegas oddsmakers?

He played the over on the Kardashian-Humphries divorce. If only they had set the number at 80 days.

Who? Oh, you mean the people who put 9,000-to-1 odds on Lovie ever displaying emotion like a human.

No clue, seeing as the Bears play better as the underdog.

They doubt the power of his poker face.

You get the bookies first. Then you get the power. Then you get the women.

3 What was Lance Briggs thinking when the Bears extended Roberto Garza's deal?

"Why hasn't Kristin Cavallari tweeted about MY assets?"

"Perhaps that guy from 'Tower Heist' can help me steal it. Alan Alda, not Eddie Murphy."

Briggs? More important, what was Forte thinking?! Pay da man!

Not sure, but his people had better lock up his cars, just in case.

Which team he and Matt Forte should play for next year.

4 If Mark Buehrle signs with the Florida Marlins ...

... the Cubs will be relieved he didn't sign with St. Louis. Cuz they'd be screwed if they did.

Hey, it's the Miami Marlins. It's a big change, and it totally matters. Get it right.

... Comcast SportsNet's Chuck Garfien may temporarily relocate to South Beach.

... the first thing he'll do is ask if he can go hunting in the Everglades.

... he'll rekindle his forbidden love affair with Ozzie. It'll be a Lifetime movie in 2012.

5 Why was Floyd Mayweather Jr. burning money in a nightclub?

He thought it was copies of the Justin Bieber Christmas album.

That sort of thing just doesn't go over well at the zoo. Irritates the giraffes.

Still trying to figure out how to "make it rain."

Because he's an idiot. No jokes from me on this one, since Floyd Mayweather Jr. IS the joke.

He's doing everything he can to avoid fighting Manny Pacquiao.

Paterno's troubles may be just beginning

Julie DiCaro

» redeyesports@tribune.com

If Chicagoans weren't already sickened by the stomach-churning allegations in the Penn State child abuse scandal, they will be after they hear Mike Ditka's defense of Penn State football coach Joe Paterno.

"I think it's very unfair, but that's the media," Ditka said in an interview with Action News in Philadelphia. "He did what he was supposed to do and unfortunately, great people get dragged down when stupid people do bad things."

Alas, it looks as if Joe Paterno, who was fired by university trustees Wednesday, did some bad things himself. While Paterno did the bare minimum required by Pennsylvania law in reporting the possible "fondling" of a young boy, a perusal of the grand jury report paints a far more damning picture of Paterno's actions than Ditka may realize. At best, Paterno negligently minimized an eyewitness account of a child being raped by former defensive coordinator Jerry Sandusky. At worst, Paterno intentionally covered up allegations of child rape to protect his program. Sandusky since has been charged with sexually assaulting eight boys.

There are many questions surrounding events in Happy Valley, but the biggest may be why Paterno has escaped criminal charges, unlike Penn State officials Tim Curley and Gary Schulz. According to Penn State receivers coach Mike McQueary, he and his father went to Paterno's home and reported that McQueary witnessed Sandusky raping a young boy in Penn State's locker room. However, Curley and Schulz both testified that Paterno reported to them only that Sandusky may have "fondled" a child.

If you're keeping score, that's four men whose sworn testimony contradicts Paterno's. While Paterno may be in the legal clear when it comes to his failure to report the alleged rape of a child to law enforcement, the veracity of his grand jury testimony is far more suspect.

Given the testimony of McQueary and his father, perjury charges against Paterno wouldn't be much of a stretch. Whether prosecutors have the courage to do the right thing is another matter.

The Anthem: Sports bar, or your parents' basement?

By Emily Van Zandt | REDEYE

Blame it on "The Wonder Years" coming to Netflix Instant: We've been feeling some serious '70s nostalgia lately. TV dinners in wood-paneled basements, fondue, Fleetwood Mac—even if you didn't live through it, the era is back in a big way.

A new sports bar in Wicker Park is hoping to capitalize on the feel—Shake 'N' Bake chicken and cans of Schlitz included.

Set to open Wednesday, The Anthem sits just across the street from sibling bar Bangers & Lace, a craft beer and sausage bar that quickly has become a Division Street staple. But while the two share owners and a similar address, there will be no confusing the hangouts. For starters, the TVs at The Anthem (two projection screens and four flatscreens) will actually be on—with sound.

"It's something that is kind of new to us," partner Matt Eisler explains. "The TVs [at Bangers & Lace] have probably been on a handful of times since we opened and sound ... we couldn't even imagine."

What Eisler and partners Jason Freiman, Kevin Heisner and Nick Podesta could imagine, though, is a spot where they'd actually want

AT A GLANCE

The Anthem

1725 W. Division St.,
773-697-4804

Hours: 4 p.m.-2 a.m.

Monday-Friday, 11 a.m.-2 a.m. Saturday and Sunday

Price range: $8-$12 entrees, $4-$6 beer

TVs: Two projection screens, four flatscreens

What to wear: Denim shirts, vintage little league T-shirts, Chuck Taylors

Don't miss: Vanilla fried Twinkies with Oreo cream, Velveeta-stuffed Jucy Lucy burger to stick around after a game.

The result is combination of your favorite neighborhood sports bar and the best basement hangout on the block, circa 1981: Cold beer, classic games on TV and a menu straight out of the dreams of a 17-year-old boy.

"We're keeping it really simple, back to the basics—we're just trying to do it really well," Eisler says.

4 THINGS TO KNOW IF YOU STOP BY THE ANTHEM NEXT WEEK

1 There's a theme. Late '70s/early '80s childhood nostalgia is the thread that runs through everything from the menu to the flooring to the music at The Anthem—but we're spared any kitsch. The wood floor emblazoned with the retro bar logo and the giant American flag hanging on the ceiling feel like the high school gym in "Anywhere, U.S.A." Keep an eye out for a coming-soon coin-operated bubble hockey machine—1980's Miracle on Ice special edition, Russia vs. U.S. Sweet.

2 Remember the food your mom would allow only on Friday nights? It's probably on the menu, a mix of sports bar and comfort food classics with a throwback twist. Start with an order of the cheese doodles (cheese dusted pork rinds) then move on to Shake n' Bake-style chicken, hamburger mac 'n' cheese, or the Jucy Lucy, a Velveeta-stuffed wonder topped with caramelized onion. If you have room, end with a vanilla fried Twinkie topped with Oreo cream—"I was actually concerned that [the Twinkie] might be crossing the line," Eisler laughs. We couldn't disagree more.

3 You won't get the drinks menu confused with Bangers & Lace. While the sibling hotspot is focused on craft brews, The Anthem's beer menu is much more ... accessible. Think the ballpark's best, priced from $4 to $6—Budweiser is the go-to, supported by a selection of tallboy cans and just enough craft choices to satisfy snobs. Although Eisler admits they're not the focus, a short cocktail list includes retro riffs on classic bar drinks. That tiki drink on the menu? The name "Episode 73" comes from the Brady Bunch Hawaiian vacation episode. Yeah, you know the one.

4 It's definitely a sports bar. "We're going to embrace the spirit of watching a game," Eisler promises. That means clear views of screens from every seat in the house thanks to an open layout. Though there are no specific college alliances, the bar plans to release a weekly schedule of other major games that will be shown. During down time you can expect to be surrounded by sports classics.

NIGHTCRAWLERS

SEEN ON THE SCENE AT ... THREE ACES, 1321 TAYLOR ST.

On Saturday night, we took a cool trip back to the past at Three Aces, where we found rocker chicks, Brando-esque bikers and an awesome D.W.P. (dude with pompadour). — CRAIG SEYMOUR

Enrique Rico
38, DJ Killer
Diller

When did you get into the biker scene?

As a younger cat, I was always into the whole '50s subculture, and now that I'm older, I've done my research and I've been into it since 1991. I've been spinning rock 'n' roll, playing rock 'n' roll music, [embracing] the whole subculture of the Rockabilly scene.

How would you describe your look?

When I go out dancin', I'll wear a zoot suit and look like Elvis. But tonight, I'm a bonafide greaser.

What's the quintessential greaser drink?

I would say beer.

Jess D-Andrea
39, kindergarten teacher/lead singer of
Fly Over State

Tell me about your band.

It's kinda like the Yeah Yeah Yeahs, but a little more intense than that.

What's the key to rock style?

Confidence and a little bit of an attitude.

What's the most rock drink?

I think anything that involves vodka. I'm a vodka drinker.

Amami Antia-Obong
25, medical student

So, it's your birthday. What's the best part about turning 25?

Probably getting lower insurance rates.

What are you drinking to celebrate?

I'm kinda a lightweight with drinking, so my friends are helping me figure it out, having me taste new stuff. I'm not a big drinker.

DON'T BRING THE NOISE

Emily VanZandt

» redeye@tribune.com

Real talk: I've been lame lately. The decision to defy my worsening health and party until I lost my voice for a solid three days in honor of my 25th combined with my annual "it's cold outside and I should start saving for the holidays anyway" attitude has led to more frequent BYOB trips, followed by bedtimes my grandmother would laugh at.

The same cannot be said for my upstairs neighbors.

While I've been busy spending quality time with Netflix Instant, they've been having quite a time of it. And they have no issues sharing.

They have no problem sharing the exact moment they get back from the bar. They have no problem sharing when they're out back for a smoke. And they definitely have no problem sharing their favorite Lady Gaga

"Telephone" remix. At 4 a.m. On repeat.

I live in Wrigleyville—a neighborhood not for the faint of party heart—and the people in our building are young. Parties don't happen every weekend, but they happen. My apartment is no exception. But I don't care if your apartment is located just above the DJ booth at John Barleycorn—at a certain point, you must sleep. You can't bring the party home every weekend. And if you do, you're going to have to keep it down (all rules void on New Year's Eve, the first warm day of spring and the morning of St. Patrick's Day).

As I see it, I have three choices in how to deal with these unlicensed weekend mini-raves.

Join: We had a philosophy when crashing upperclassmen parties in college that if you showed up late enough and with beer, you were welcome just about anywhere. I'm sure the same goes for a Wrigleyville margarita party, right? If you can't beat 'em, you can at least drink their booze until you forget why you were going to complain in the first place.

Fight: There's the broomstick-to-the-ceiling bit, but I'm not sure my broom reaches the ceiling. Actually, I'm not sure I have a broom. But I do have a stereo. And a wide selection of country hits from the early 1990s. There is no pop music that the Dixie Chicks can't drown out. And really, does anything kill a party faster than the Dixie Chicks?

Revenge: The 6 a.m. cleaning kind. Vacuuming, re-painting, general use of the garbage disposal. Anything that involves strong smells and loud noises. Did I mention that I do my best cleaning to a soundtrack of thrash metal and noise rock?

And if all else fails, there's always trusty Midwestern passive-aggression. Maybe write a column about it? Check.

Whales

Have an orgiastic time with Whales

Chicago rockers Whales answered our Chi-Tunes questionnaire at metromix.com. Do the same and your band could appear in RedEye and Metromix.

What makes your live show great?

Feeding off of the audience. They're the ones who dictate where we tend to go both sonically and emotionally.

Describe your sound in five words or less.

Soaring from a tall building.

Tell us something random about the band, and why that's significant.

Whales' guitar wiz is a high school physics teacher. He approaches Whales' arrangements and sonic grandeur with the precision of a musical Bill Nye.

Who would you want to work with, and who would you never work with? Why?

We would love to work with Ronald Jones ... the man made incredible textures and coaxed the most ridiculous alien tones from his guitar. Working with him would be a wonderful dream. We would never work with Odd Future because we like gay people and enjoy having women in our lives.

» Listen to Whales' "Sunshine" at metromix.com

If the band were a breakfast cereal, what would it be and why?

Whales are like Frosted Flakes in that we are orgiastic.

What's the best album you've heard recently?

Weekend's "Sports"

What song do you never want to hear again?

Tune-Yards' "Bizness"

What is Chicago's best music venue and why?

Quenchers. They serve over 300 beers and the staff is incredibly friendly and supportive of Chicago's music scene.

‘Farewell’ but not goodbye

St. Louis Post-Dispatch

Judas Priest’s Farewell World Tour is making the rounds, but front man Rob Halford says the tour is not as final as it may sound.

“I wish there was another word besides ‘farewell,’” he said. “This is our last big world tour. We’re stopping the big two-year treks.”

But the door still is open for smaller, shorter tours.

Putting on the type of shows Judas Priest is known for is physically demanding, especially over long periods, Halford said.

“It’s grueling to put on these very physical shows, getting a few hours sleep and driving to the next city to do it all over again,” he said. “But we would never lose the passion for performing. We love to do that, getting out there and seeing the fans who love and support you and give you 100 percent.”

What Halford expects to do is go back to basics with the band’s tour schedule.

“We wouldn’t cut any corners, but we would just generally get deeper into the music,” he said.

Before that happens, the band will pull out all the stops on this tour, which Halford says is a full-on metal extravaganza with a new stage and costumes, lasers, fire and more. Judas Priest will play tracks from the band’s first album, “Rocka Rolla” (1974) through its most recent studio album, “Nostradamus” (2008).

“It’s interesting listening to these songs,” Halford said, “seeing if a song written in 1973 will stand up to our last release.”

12 Chicago newbies awarded Michelin Guide Bib Gourmand

Chicago Tribune
Year 2 of Michelin Guide Chicago week kicked off Wednesday morning with the announcements of the Bib Gourmand, a designation given to restaurants deemed “inspectors’ favorites for good value.”

Twelve Chicago restaurants were added to the 2012 guide selected for restaurants serving “two courses and a glass of wine or dessert for $40 or less.”

The new Chicago-based Bib Gourmand selections for 2012 are:

- Arami
- Avec
- Bistronomic
- Fogon
- Gemini Bistro
- GT Fish & Oyster
- Lao Sze Chuan
- Maude’s Liquor Bar
- Mundial Cocina Mestiza
- Owen & Engine
- Perennial Virant
- Sol de Mexico

A FEW NOTES

- » No Bib Gourmand winners in last year’s guide were elevated to star status. This includes restaurants destined for breakout: Girl & The Goat, The Publican, Frontera Grill.
- » After much griping from the dining community at large about Avec’s exclusion (unfortunate timing with a fire last summer), it makes the 2012 guide, though not as a star.
- » There are 21 types of cuisines represented in the Bibs.
- » The Michelin stars will be announced Tuesday. The guide will be on sale the next day.

Auction off the stars

Reuters

She was among the most photographed celebrities of her day, and he is among the top pop stars of his. But whose pictures are worth more—Marilyn Monroe or Justin Bieber?

Memorabilia collectors and fans of the two stars soon will find out in a four-day, December auction of Hollywood memorabilia, called Icons and Idols, from Julien's Auctions.

The behind-the-scenes images of Bieber filming his music video for "One Less Lonely Girl" and Monroe, which vary from items when she was an unknown to those when she was a star, are just a few of the 1,600 items from film, music and sports figures expected to go under the hammer in a sale that could fetch $2 million to $4 million, auctioneer Darren Julien estimated.

The 14 Polaroid photographs of Bieber, 17, were taken by a crew member on the video set, and are expected to sell for $1,200. But when his legion of young "Beliebers" catch wind of the sale, that price could skyrocket to somewhere around $6,000, Julien says.

"He is highly collectible, and these kind of photographs rarely go on sale. I don't think Justin ever intended them to go on sale," Julien said.

The Monroe items range from early pictures of her as a 19-year-old and a never-before-sold letter, expected to fetch $30,000 to $50,000, she sent to her mother while still known as Norma Jean Baker and married to Jimmie Dougherty in which she talks of her future hopes.

Also up for sale is an image taken by Cecil Beaton after Monroe became a movie star in which the actress is reclining with a rose. The pictures were put in a Cartier triptych frame and said to be her favorite images of herself. Its estimated sale price is $80,000-$100,000.

A taste of Spam

By Josh Noel

CHICAGO TRIBUNE

When you've never tasted Spam, there's only one way to prepare for the Spam Museum: Eat Spam. And the places to do that in Austin, Minn., are plentiful.

Steve's serves Spam pizza. Johnny's Main Event offers a Spam Reuben. Kenny's Oak Grill makes a Spam de' Melt—Spam, melted American and Swiss cheeses, bacon and sour cream (on wheat bread because, you know, it's much healthier that way).

To fully appreciate this town's most famous museum, it seemed appropriate to first try its signature food. How else could I understand the greatness? The history? The sodium (a mere 57 percent of a day's recommended intake)? Pizza seemed the gentlest route, so I stopped by Steve's and ordered one.

The cheese was gooey, the pineapple sweet, the crust dry and the Spam ... well, different. Spongy. A little smoky. Plenty salty. It reminded me of waterlogged salami.

But Austin, population 25,000, is not the home of pepperoni. It is the home of Spam, which turns 75 years old next year.

The Spam Museum

1101 N. Main St., Austin, Minn.; 507-437-5100; spam.com/games/museum

Open 10 a.m.-5 p.m. Monday to Saturday and noon-5 p.m. Sunday. Admission is free.

Austin restaurants that serve Spam include:

- » Steve's (421 N. Main St., 507-437-3249)
- » Kenny's Oak Grill (307 W. Oakland Ave., 507-437-4135)
- » Jerry's Other Place (1207 N. Main St., 507-433-2331)
- » Johnny's Main Event (1130 N. Main St., 507-433-8875).

Properly primed, I made my next stop at the Spam Museum, which is 16,500 square feet and sits in a brick building in the Hormel Foods complex east of downtown. Steps inside, a lifelong Austin resident named Jim, who wore a shirt with the Spam logo, stopped me.

"You just walked through our great wall of Spam," Jim said.

He pointed above the door, where 3,390 Spam cans hung in a tight honeycomb.

Spam Museum in Austin, Minn.

"Those are real Spam cans, but they're empty," he said. "It would have been a waste to put all that Spam on the wall."

After posing for a picture with Spammy, a smiling, 4-foot-tall can of Spam with arms and legs and cartoonish eyes, I sat through a 10-minute Spam orientation film to learn that America's most famous meat has been "made with love since 1937." I was pretty sure pigs were the other ingredient.

One museum exhibit highlights Spam's explosive growth during World War II, when it helped sustain a nation and its troops. Another demonstrates its global popularity.

A trip to the museum makes clear that, love it, hate it, we are all familiar with Spam.

Nutritional food on a lean budget

MCT

You can get healthy proteins, carbohydrates and fats for less money.

"The strategy is to buy inexpensive foods that still provide the nutrients that support good health," says Dr. Mickey Harpaz, a nutritionist and exercise physiologist with offices in New York and Connecticut. Some tips:

Stop buying junk

Processed entrees, snacks, soda and juices often are expensive and do nothing for your body.

Look beyond meat

Beans, lentils, chickpeas and eggs generally are cheap and rich in protein. If you buy canned beans, rinse them to cut down on salt.

Go for frozen produce

Fruits and vegetables are pricey out of season, but frozen options tend to be nutrient-rich thanks to "flash freezing" done just after picking. You also can load up on cheap in-season produce, especially at farmers' markets, and freeze it.

Buy nuts in bulk

A handful a day is an excellent protein source, but small containers at grocery stores are too costly. Get nuts from wholesale stores and keep them in air-tight containers.

Buy canned fish

Tuna in water (not oil) is a good alternative to fresh fish; rinse before use. Frozen seafood often is expensive, but the fresh catch-of-the-day may not be—ask the seafood department.

Choose 'whole' foods whenever possible

Buy a full cabbage and shred it yourself, for example, rather than a pre-packaged bag.

Shop smart

Write weekly menus, follow grocery lists and take advantage of coupons, store brands and bulk items. Don't shop when you're hungry and more likely to make impulse buys.

Buy chicken

Dollar for pound, it's often a bargain compared to other meats. To save even more, buy chicken whole and separate it into parts for meals, soups and sandwiches. Chicken liver also is low-priced for the protein and iron it provides.

Hiding from ACNE?

Then you or your child may qualify for a research study that is evaluating a new investigational topical medication for the treatment of moderate facial acne.

The study requires:

- Patients 12 years of age or older
- 9 visits over 14 weeks at the Northwestern University Department of Dermatology

RED-HOT LIPS

Chicago Tribune

Conventional wisdom would offset a bold crimson pout with nearly naked eyes. Yet celebs such as Kim Kardashian, Emma Stone and Uma Thurman prove that high-definition eyes can coexist prettily with red lips.

“It’s a matter of personal preference, whether you wear a very clean eye with minimal makeup, or go all the way and pair a red lip with dramatic eye makeup,” said one-name wonder Uzo, Nars Cosmetics’ international lead makeup artist. “What is modern right now is a look that is in the middle.”

Red lips/nude eyes isn’t the only “rule” being broken. “Many ethnic clients believe that you shouldn’t wear red lipstick if you have full lips,” said Alex Sanchez, national makeup artist for Lancome. “That’s the biggest myth—like saying your legs are too gorgeous, so you shouldn’t wear a short skirt.”

There are some don’ts. “Don’t wear red if you aren’t going to be able to check them throughout the day/ night,” Chanel celebrity makeup artist Kara Yoshimoto Bua said. “Do not put a shiny lip moisturizer on top of a red lipstick; it dissolves and breaks down the pigment—and gets messy.”

Here are answers to other burning questions about red lips.

What shades and finishes are hot?

Uzo recommends true reds that have no blue undertone for fair and medium complexions. Deeper reds with a blue undertone look best on darker complexions, she said. She likes a matte finish, as with Nars Pure Matte Lipstick in Mascate or Vesuvio ($25; nars-cosmetics.com) and Nars Jungle Red Lipstick \(\$24\).

Sanchez prefers shades that create “a velvety-stained, just-bitten effect.” Lancome Color Design Lipstick in Red Stiletto ($22; lancome-usa.com) is his go-to color. Bua’s favorite red is Chanel Rouge Allure Lipstick in Excessive \(\$32\) and says the look should be between matte and shiny.

Are you noticing any mistakes with red lips?

“The lip liner has to precisely match your lipstick or else you will get an aging two-tone effect,” Sanchez said.

What do you do with the rest of the face?

On eyes, Uzo likes coppery, shimmery eye shadows and rich, dark brown eyeliners smudged with dark brown shimmer. Finish with defined, bold eyebrows but minimal cheek color that is rosy or lightly bronzed to warm the skin, Uzo said. Going easy on the eyes and pulling hair back taut make for a classic look with red lips, Sanchez said. “Don’t be afraid to define the eyes with a sexy fringe of liquid liner and mascara,” he said.

Olsen
GETTY IMAGES

Los Angeles Times

Earlier this year, actress Elizabeth Olsen was asked about her interest in fashion in an interview with Elle Girl. It was a valid question for the 22-year-old, the younger sister of twins Mary-Kate and Ashley Olsen, designers of the clothing lines the Row and Elizabeth and James. The actress said she had no interest in working in fashion like her older sisters, but she did give a little insight into her style evolution.

"I used to be strictly Annie Hall in high school," Olsen said. "I would wear the hat and suspenders and all the button-up shirts and masculine pants."

Olsen, who is getting raves for her work in "Martha Marcy May Marlene," has evolved into a fashion-wise, elegant movie star. She attended a premiere for the movie during the 55th BFI London Film Festival wearing a baby pink sequin boat-neck blouse and tiered tulle and lace skirt, both from the Chanel spring 2011 couture collection. She finished the pink ensemble with shiny, pointy-toed champagne heels by Christian Louboutin. Her pairing of the sequin and tulle textures was sophisticated and playful.

With holiday parties approaching, you'll need to start thinking about your winter party wardrobe. Olsen's look makes for fun gala or premiere attire, and her mixed textures can be the perfect inspiration when planning your holiday looks.

It takes more than just a celeb to make these books jump off the shelves

By Dana Moran | REDEYE

Remember those historical biographies with gripping names like "John Adams," "Thomas Jefferson" and "George Washington"? Booooooring! Today's celebs know it takes more than just a famous face to sell your life story. We checked out the latest crop of biographies and memoirs to determine which titles should send us dashing for the library (yes, those still exist). DAMORAN@TRIBUNE.COM | @REDEYEDANA

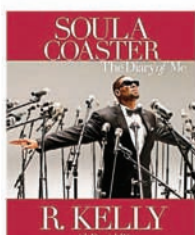

Mindy Kaling

"Is Everyone Hanging Out Without Me? (And Other Concerns)"

We worry about this too, Mindy! But if you were our friend, we definitely wouldn't hang out without you ... or at least without drunk-dialing you.

RATING:

R. Kelly

"Soulcoaster: The Diary of Me"

Just ... yes. This could have gone so many different, inappropriate routes—although we're kind of wondering if it's a companion book to "Soul Plane."

RATING:

Jane Lynch

"Happy Accidents"

"Happy Accidents" makes us think falling into a manhole and finding a pot of gold, not recovering from alcoholism and becoming Sue Sylvester. Still, we're happy for her.

RATING:

Nicole 'Snooki' Polizzi

"Confessions of a Guidette"

Somewhat unoriginal, yes, but what could a guidette's confessions be about other than

"why the [Jersey Shore] house smells like alcohol and dog's butt"? Disclosure: That's a phrase we never thought we'd see on a dust jacket.

RATING:

Justin Bieber

"Belieber! Fame, Faith, and the Heart of Justin Bieber" by Cathleen Falsani

So wait, this comes with the actual heart of Justin Bieber? We thought Selena Gomez/that alleged baby mama had it ... dramaaaaa!

$1,750

That was the leading bid Wednesday for Johnson, the baby boa constrictor that Justin Bieber brought to the MTV Video Music Awards in August. Proceeds for the auction, which runs through Nov. 29 at charitybuzz.com, go to charity.

SPOILER ALERT

37.5 PERCENT

That's the percentage of cheftestants on "Top Chef: Texas" who are from Chicago. All six locals made it past the preliminary round and into the top 16, with Beverly Kim of Aria joining the cast Wednesday. The other Chicago chefs are Richie Farina and Chris Jones of Moto, Sarah Gruenberg of Spiaggia, Heather Terhune of Sable and Chuy Valencia of Chilam Bilam.

“ I could be pregnant forever. I love it.”

Jessica Simpson to eonline.com. Let's see what she's saying in her ninth month.

“ Farts. To me, there's nothing funnier.”

George Clooney, to Rolling Stone, on his love of whoopee cushions.

“ I want a guy who has balls enough to come up to me and be as bold as I am.”

"The Big Bang Theory" star Kaley Cuoco in the December issue of Playboy. She added: "I'm deeply, truly attracted to the funny guy. I'm always like, 'Can you make me laugh? Because I will make YOU laugh.'"

SUITOR SEQUEL?

Who wants to be Kim Kardashian's next boyfriend? Several offshore gambling houses are setting the odds, according to nydailynews.com, and perhaps not surprisingly, athletes dominate the list. Here are the odds.

Blake Griffin, 5-1

Kanye West, 8-1

Reggie Bush, 10-1

Ryan Reynolds, 10-1

Usher, 12-1

Derek Jeter, 14-1
